

That the prisoner had visited her frequently before the alleged homicide - That he had been seen in bed with her on one or two occasions - It was in evidence by the father that she had been upon her person & that she had been taking medicine - It was in evidence by a Physician, that Thomas Shultz had said to him in March 1866, that he had a venereal disease called syphilis and that he had contracted that disease from Anna Foster - The Physician treated him for that disease. He stated that the disease was in its primary state. It was in evidence by a Boston Person that the prisoner told him previous to the alleged homicide, that she had this disease and that she intended to get the cure through what gave it to him. It was in evidence that the prisoner was at the house of the deceased on the Sunday previous to her death - That he was there on the Wednesday previous to that time & that on both occasions he had private conversations with her - It was testified to that he was seen Friday morning the same day on which the deceased left home near her father's house travelling on a road parallel to the one on which the girl was going - This road led among other places to the Bates Place and was nearer than the one which the girl was travelling - It was in evidence that the prisoner went to the house of Ann Miller on that Friday morning and found her in bed & heard over the a whisper conversation with her - It was in evidence that the prisoner on Thursday was at the house of Ann Miller. That he sent a man for a quart of liquor that on the same day he went